Flat sheet also appears with this brand, as at Happy Hollow, near Melbourne. Barry Gallagher, of the office of John Patrick, reports this flat sheeting pressed into a roughcast pattern on a building in the Eureka Stockade reserve, Ballarat: this is branded with a crown, and the word 'phoenix' below, but it is unclear whether the remaining words were absent or simply invisible.

Also an example at Melrose, South Australia, original source unknown, as advised by Bill Nairn, 1995. The shed at Indi was originally built as the town hall in Stirling St, Balmoral, in 1887, and was moved to the present site in 1976. It appears to have been prefabricated, but whether by Davies Bros themselves, or by a Melbourne worker using their iron is unclear.

There is also a Davies 'ELEPHANT BRAND' found on sheet but not corrugated iron, at Kow Plains homestead, Victoria.

⁶⁸ Illustration supplied by Linda Barraclough, 1998. The Henty family's barn at Muntham, western Victoria, is reported by Allom Lovell & Associates to have what appears to be the original roofing iron, branded "Gospel Oak Galvanised Tinned Iron". However no symbol is mentioned, the spelling of galvanized is presumably incorrect, and the iron cannot be original if the building dates from before 1851 as claimed. ⁷¹ Toilets, Rialto Building, Collins St, Melbourne, 1889; roof of barn, Yering Station vineyard, Yarra Glen, Victoria; stable / shearing shed, 'Killeen', Victoria; the hayshed; 'Highbury', Soldiers Road, Hillside, Victoria (as reported by Neil Cox to the Gippsland Heritage Journal 1995); and in the stables of the Ewin property near Blayney, New South Wales. This latter building is said (by its owner, the Rev Angus Ewin of Bathurst) to have been re-roofed immediately after World War II, but in that era of building material shortages this may well have been done using secondhand iron.

Collection of Lindsay Thompson, Gippsland, photo supplied by May Leatch 2009. Another example from this source is difficult to read, but appears to have lettering between 'AUSTRALIA' and the oval, and at the bottom '26CML'.

¹⁰⁸ Lysaght's Referee (1938), pp 15, 37, 39.

From 1938 Lysaghts incorporated numerals within the arms of the orb, indicating the year of manufacture; all iron made at the Port Kembla works had the letter 'K' incorporated into the brand; and roofing iron sheets had a six-pointed star on the reverse side. From about 1950 the numerals for the date ceased to appear in the Maltese cross of the orb, and were placed between the orb and the word 'Australia'. In roofing sheets the year of manufacture now appeared within the star on the reverse side.

*Red orb brand, containing the 'K' for Port Kembla, and the date of manufacture '60' for the year of manufacture, in this case 9 November 1959).*¹⁰⁹

¹⁴⁰ For the following sites insufficient detail is recorded to assign them to the categories below: lean-to at the south end of the Woolingubrah Inn, near Cathcart; Stubbers Hut near Licola (Gippsland Heritage Journal Collection); J B Plain hut, Alpine Road, B B Plain, Victoria (as advised by Graeme Butler, 1995); various unspecified sites, Gippsland, some of c 1900, reported by John Little, 1995.

¹⁴² Redcliffe was one of the three major brands sold by James Moore & Co of Melbourne in 1913, though whether it was branded with a crown is not apparent: James Moore & Sons Pty. Ltd., Price List 96 August 1913 (Melbourne 1913), p 1.

¹⁴³ Additions to Briagolong Mechanics Institute, 1887: information from Linda Barraclough, 1994. With the words 'trade mark': 'Old Urangeline' homestead near Brand, NSW; slaughterhouse, Gulf Station, Victoria; 118 Semaphore Rd, South Australia, c 1900 (as reported by Bill Nairn, 1995); stables, 'Aeroview', Steele Street, Leongatha, Victoria, believed to date from c 1900-1920; loose pieces, 'Cloverdale Cottage', Endeavour Hills, undated; and an offcut piece at 'Highbury', Soldiers Road, Hillside, Victoria (as reported by Neil Cox to the Gippsland Heritage Journal 1995); three ites in the Snowy River – Orbost area reported by May Leatch, April 2006: Russell's, Bete Bolong, of c 1927; Taylor's, Irvine Lane, undated; Trewin's, Jarrahmond, c 1910; salvaged by Lindsay Thompson, 1991, from a house in Orbost, photo provided by May Leatch 2009.
